THURSDAY EVENING, JULY 22, 1880.

MOCKING BIRD FOOD -Take one egg and one potato, somewhat larger than the egg; boi the egg at least 20 minutes, so it will become mealy; but in a pan as much salt as will lie on a silver five cent piece, also as much pulverized red pepper as will lie on a dime; with a pliable table knife rub the salt, perper and yolk of the egg thoroughly together, then add the pitate, giving the whole mass a thorough rub bing together. When done, no pieces of the egg should be seen. Durnz "dog days" replenish the bird's cap two or three times daily, as the food soon sours. At that seas in it must be made fresh daily. In winter it will keep till used. Brds will eat the store food when they can g. t nothing else.

It is a common remark to hear, "I have no lu k wi h my bird." With such stuff as it gets. no wonder. In the South I have seen birds kept on the above food in cages for fitteen yearthe salt keeps them in fine plumage. My bird has been kept for five years on the above. They should be allowed to fle about the room as often as once a week. My bird is out talt the time, and bathes daily in a large, shallow vegetable dish on the floor, and goes into his cage when ready. He signs as well at liver y in the room, as in the cage.

Give them all the raw beef, out into small bits, they want. Give bak-d apple, suspended so they can reach it. Get worms at the flur mills and feed stores. Mine has a dez n worms deily. Give them all the grasshopper, butterflies, cocoons and lettnes they want. Keep them out if hot sunshipe. Give them all the fruit they want, when obtainable. "Flip" loves praches, plums, charits grapes berries, pre-servet—in fact, almost enviling that is soft or eweet.—J. W. M. in New York Times.
